Introduction

The community of Ellen Grove in Brisbane's South West is on the cusp of change. In 2015, Wesley Mission Queensland commissioned a report titled 'The Ellen Grove Community Mapping and Strategic Directions Report' to understand the status of a number of key social issues that impact on a person's ability to be a contributing citizen, and a recognised part of Queensland's present and future.

Just over half of the respondents in the report (57%) indicated that they had concerns about the area and when asked what they were, they focussed on:

- a sense of being the 'forgotten suburb' for funding, services, public transport, and maintenance
- considerable concerns about maintenance of the community by council,
- concerns about key community safety issues of substance abuse and excess noise from hooning, and
- a lack of employment opportunities.

Community organisations who, by and large, provide outreach service to the community of Ellen Grove agreed that their experience of the area echoed the challenges experienced by residents. Specific issues that were noted by service providers included:

- persistent social issues of domestic and drug related violence
- the stigma attached to the name and the area
- the transient nature of part of the community
- a lack of positive interactions between community and police
- a lack of infrastructure, and
- low levels of engagement in education and learning.

What is most concerning is that these issues have persisted for decades, providing the basis for why residents feel that Ellen Grove is a 'forgotten suburb'.

But change is afoot.

Community service organisations, State Government departments, Brisbane City Council staff, universities, residents of better resourced, neighbouring communities and various Brisbane businesses are working with Ellen Grove residents to bring about whole-of-community change. This will take time and a sustained commitment in service delivery, resource injection and infrastructure development. However this is crucial if we are to ask the people of Ellen Grove to also support change. A community cannot reach its full potential when there are so few safe public spaces, community resources or other amenities to promote and support social inclusion, citizenship and 'neighbourhoodliness' – a term coined during the consultation of the research report that perfectly encapsulates the feeling and the goal of the EG 2020 action plan.

Elorac Place, an old-style community centre, and the local Carole Park Primary School represent the two main facilities for community gatherings and connection. How can we better use these resources to achieve the identified aims for change?

Wesley Mission Queensland has become the responsible entity for the work at Elorac Place and has employed a community development worker to implement this action plan with the residents of Ellen Grove.

We are excited about this collaboration to bring the aims of EG 2020 to life and we invite you to be part of this historic change.
